2.1 Programme derivation

The Scotland SOTA Programme is based on the Marilyns. The Marilyn programme considers the relative height of summits compared to their surroundings and defines a minimum of 150m climb from the surrounding cols in order to qualify. This results in over 1200 Summits in Scotland, ranging from little more than 150m in height to over 1300m.

The Marilyn programme is the work of Alan Dawson. Alan has written a book, "The Relative Hills of Britain", ISBN 1-85284-068-4, published in 1992 by Cicerone Press, Milnthorpe, Cumbria. This book covers the Marilyns in detail and is invaluable reference material for activators and chasers alike. Full details of how to obtain this book, together with much more information on the Marilyn programme, a discussion group, etc. can be found at Alan Dawson's web site, <http://www.staclee.freemove.co.uk/>. The Marilyn list, as defined in the above references is the definitive list of valid Summits for Scotland.

¹ See General Rules for parameter definitions

2.1.1 Mapping to Marilyn regions

The Marilyn programme splits Scotland into no less than 28 regions. Because of the extensive ranges of mountains throughout Scotland, it has been decided to split the country into simple geographically defined SOTA regions and map the Marilyn regions onto these. The mapping is as follows:

Scottish region mapping
SOTA region	Reference prefix	RHB region	RHB summits	SOTA summits
Northern Scotland	NS	14	34	154
		15	37
		16	83

2.2 Management of SOTA Scotland

Andy Sinclair MM0FMF is the current Association Manager for the SOTA Scotland Association.

2.3 General information

To be completed.

2.4 Rights of way and access issues

The situation in Scotland is much freer than in England and Wales. The law has been clarified since the 2003 Land Reform Act. There has always been an accepted “right to roam” in Scotland although the legal position has been less clear. However, the Open Access Code has made the rights and responsibilities of outdoor users much clearer. An excellent guide to outdoor access can be found at <http://www.outdooraccess-scotland.com>

You should bear in mind that significant areas of Scotland’s wild country is used for various recreational hunting pastimes. This includes shooting game birds and also Deer Stalking. If you go walking you need to be aware of where and when such hunting takes place. During the Stag season access to many of the popular summits may be limited by the landowners. Many of the estates go to great lengths to allow walkers to continue to access the land during the stalking season so SOTA activators are encouraged to co-operate where possible with any restrictions that are temporarily imposed. The hillphones service contains up to date information on where and when hunting will be taking place and can be found at <http://www.snh.org.uk/hillphones>

2.5 Maps and navigation

The definitive maps for hill walking in Scotland are published by the Ordnance Survey (OS). They are available in virtually all stationers and bookshops, or can be ordered by post. Locally, in mountainous areas, corner shops can usually be expected to carry copies of the immediate area.

OS maps come in all shapes and sizes but the most useful for general mountaineering purposes are the 1:50,000 “Landranger” series and the 1:25,000 “Explorer” series (used to be “Outdoor Leisure”).

The Landranger series covers the entire country in some 200 maps and at 2cm to 1km are excellent for route planning. Although these maps show a reasonable amount of detail, they are a bit too small-scale for serious mountain work.

The Explorer series of maps is strongly recommended for specific Expeditions. The level of detail is significantly greater than on the Landranger series and includes extremely useful information such as walls and other significant features that are useful for navigation.

Generally, navigation in Scottish Mountains is not particularly difficult, at least if you stick to the paths and the weather remains fine. It is, however, easy to get disoriented, especially in the mist that is an all too frequent visitor to Scotland’s hills. Only the foolhardy will venture onto the Scottish Mountains without a compass and the knowledge to use it. A GPS is not an adequate substitute.

2.6 Grid reference system used

The Ordnance Survey of Great Britain defines a rectangular grid system, which covers the entire landmass of Britain. This system is used throughout this Association Reference Manual. Typically, the system provides a unique reference to 100m accuracy, though this can be varied if required. Full details of this system can be found at <http://www.ordsvy.gov.uk/>.

2.7 Safety considerations

All SOTA activators should be aware that mountains can be dangerous places. The weather at low levels can be very different from that at higher levels. In addition the weather can change very rapidly from benign to dangerous. As a minimum you should review the material on the Mountaineering Council Of Scotland website. There is a wealth of information here and is pertinent for people of all abilities. See <http://www.mcofs.org.uk/mountain-safety.asp>
